

JEFFERY'S STILL AS OF THE JOB

President of D. & R. G. Denies Report of His Resignation.

J. C. DAILEY RETURNS HOME

BIG IMPROVEMENTS TO BE MADE IN TUCKER YARDS.

J. C. Dailey, general superintendent of the Utah division of the Denver & Rio Grande railway returned home last evening from a conference in Denver with the operating officials of the road relative to the various changes that are being made in the management. He says that the Denver papers, upon the resignation of A. C. Ridgway, general manager, have printed sensational rumors, many of which have no foundation in fact and which have caused much excitement and speculation. The rumor published in the Denver Post that President Jeffrey had resigned, he said, he believed was the rumor, according to a special from New York to the Denver Republican, and Mr. Dailey believes the denial is official. Mr. Dailey says that he knows very little about the changes to be made as he was occupied while in Denver with business related to the Utah division. Of course he heard many of the rumors, but says most of them were unfounded.

"Salt Lake City was much interested in the rumor that you were to become the general manager of the road to take the place vacated by Mr. Ridgway," said the reporter. "Many were in hopes that it was true."

Improvements at Tucker.
"Well, if it is true I do not know anything about it yet," replied Mr. Dailey. "As I understand it, Vice President Schlacks is to take up the work of general manager, at least at present. The company is contemplating spending a great deal of money in improvements, as has been given out lately, and it was in regard to some of the plans for my division that I went to Denver. We talked over plans for big improvements in the railway yards at Tucker and decided to spend approximately $100,000."

"Is it true that Harriman has gained control of the D. & R. G.?" was asked. "That is something I know nothing about."

"It has been reported that W. L. Parks, general manager of the Union Pacific, is to take the place of Mr. Ridgway. If he should come over to the Denver & Rio Grande, do you think that would indicate that Mr. Ridgway has gained control?" was the next question.

"No, sir," answered Mr. Dailey emphatically. "They are liable to get anyone whom they want. There is no reason why Parks might not be persuaded to work for Gould if he could improve his condition by coming over."

Denial by Jeffrey.
Following is the special from New York to the Denver Republican in which Mr. Jeffrey denies that he has tendered his resignation.

"Edward T. Jeffrey, president of the Denver & Rio Grande Railroad company, when seen at the office of the road at No. 116 Broadway, strenuously denied that there is to be a 'shake-up' on the road, or that he would retire."

"A. C. Ridgway, the general manager, voluntarily terminated his connection with the road to enter private business," said Mr. Jeffrey. "He was an officer of the road and will be taken over by Charles H. Schlacks, vice president, at Denver. Aside from that, rumors of changes are made out of whole cloth. No other changes or resignations are in contemplation."

Mr. Jeffrey exhibited a letter he had just received from an officer of the road in Denver, to which was attached a cutting from the Denver Post. The writer of the letter stated that he had been present when the interview had been given to the Post reporter, and that many statements in the article were unwarranted and overdrawn.

"If the Denver reporters can make a sensation they usually do so," said Mr. Jeffrey, with considerable emphasis.

ELKS' SPECIAL TRAIN TO BE BIG SPLURGE

On Friday evening, July 9, at 7 o'clock, the special train carrying the local Elks and their friends to the big Elks' convention in Los Angeles will leave for the Salt Lake Route, and many preparations are being made for a big crowd and a comfortable trip. The arrangements for the train are in the hands of Traveling Passenger Agent E. B. Erwin of the Salt Lake Route, and he says that reservations are coming in rapidly and that extra cars may have to be added. The running time will be twenty-five hours, the Salt Lake Elks arriving in Los Angeles at 8 o'clock Saturday night, July 10.

The train will consist of six cars, unless more are needed, and among these will be a baggage car, a buffet car and an observation car. All the supplies for the buffet car have been donated to the local lodge of Elks and no extra charge will be made on the train for refreshments from this car. On top of the baggage car will be placed the famous siren whistle, which has several times on such occasions awakened the echoes along the Salt Lake Route. This whistle weighs 200 pounds and it takes nearly 100 pounds of steam to blow it. "It will play any old tune on the calendar," said Erwin, "and it can be heard for five miles. The Elks who travel to Los Angeles on my train are sure to get the work of their money." Mr. Erwin will personally accompany this train.

Short Line Takes Over
Another Idaho Road

It is reported that the Oregon Short Line has taken over the interests of the Albion Interurban, which has for its object the construction of an electric line from Albion to Burley and has added it to the Harriman system in the state. The transfer, it is said, means the immediate construction of the road and the installation of steam instead of electricity as motive power.

The deal for the sale by the Interurban stockholders has been pending for a long time. A present check on the rail connection between Albion and the outer world. Enterprising citizens there raised the capital to build an electric road and considerable work has been done on it.

Steel Bridge Reminds
McCartney of Story

The Western Pacific has commenced the construction of a steel bridge at Pallas, Nev., which is remarkable from the fact that it is the only steel structure of the kind in 60 miles, covering a stretch of country from this city to Beckwith. Speaking of the bridge recently, Chief Engineer H. M. McCartney of the Western Pacific said it reminded him of a story. He said:

"When the Salt Lake Route was being built I received a telegram from a steel bridge construction company in Pittsburgh offering us plans and specifications for such work. I thanked them for their courtesy in thinking of us and concluded the letter by saying: 'At the present time our chief trouble is in getting water to look the mails of the survey parties, and from this you will see what use we have for steel bridges.' The answer I received was: 'I have your letter and note the deplorable absence of water over which to build bridges.'"

Rate to Encampment Is Lowered by D. & R. G.

Grand Junction, Colo., has been complaining that the rate over the Denver & Rio Grande to Salt Lake for the G. A. R. encampment was altogether too steep, and prominent citizens there took the matter up with Frank A. Wadell, assistant passenger agent at Denver, with the result that an announcement is made that the rate from Grand Junction to Salt Lake is only $9, instead of $12, and that the annual San Juan excursion from that place will this year be abandoned.

Railroad Brevities.

Word was received at the Salt Lake Route office yesterday that three carloads of Fort Wayne, Ind., Elks and their friends would pass through Salt Lake today on their way to Yellowstone park. The crowd numbers sixty-five people. They will make a stop at the park and will return here on Saturday, July 10, and continue on to Los Angeles to attend the big Elks' convention.

Yesterday attachments of the Twelfth cavalry and the Twelfth infantry, including a large number of mounted troops, passed through Orderville on the Harriman lines, on their way to San Francisco and the Philippines.

Ned Royle Gathers
Lore for Sequel to "The Squaw Man"

"In the Blood" Depicts the Indian Heritage in Conflict With a Refined Environment—Revival of "The Struggle Everlasting."

Edward Milton Royle, the famous playwright, who in Salt Lake is always affectionately called "Ned" Royle, is once more at home. Mr. Royle is just returning from a trip to the Utah desert, to the cradle of the "Squaw Man."

Mr. Royle's most famous production, "The Squaw Man," which he has just finished, is a sequel to his famous "Squaw Man."

As a racial study "In the Blood" is exactly the reverse of "The Squaw Man." In "The Squaw Man" was depicted the life of an English nobleman among Indians. The hereditary instincts of generations of culture and refinement made him somewhat ill-fitted for the free and easy life of the aborigine. It will be remembered that the Squaw man returned to his British home, taking with him the child. With the life of this child, the son of the English nobleman and the Indian woman, "In the Blood" has to deal.

The possibility of the drama may easily be seen. The youngster, reared in the best English society, surrounded by English luxury, still feels the mysterious influence that impels him to go back to his mother's people. Though he knows nothing of the Indians, he cannot but feel that mysterious call to the wilderness over which his maternal ancestors roamed.

Story is Fascinating.
The plot of Mr. Royle's new romantic Indian drama is marvelously worked out, and the story of the young half-blood's experiences as the young English nobleman, as an English army officer and as an Indian back at the old White Rocks agency is as fascinating as it is unusual.

Mr. Royle's play has been written and it will be produced by the Liebers early this season. His visit to the Utah agency was more for the purpose of studying the Indians a little more closely than for the purpose of obtaining any further material for his new play. While he was in White Rocks Mr. Royle had the opportunity of witnessing the famous sun dance of the Utes.

"The more I visit the Indians," said Mr. Royle, "the more convinced I am that the Indians are by inherent instinct and training sun worshippers. They will not tell you so. The Indian seldom speaks of his religion. If he speaks it is to tell you that he is an agnostic. 'Indian don't know,' he assures you."

"To my mind the real explanation of the sun dance is that the Indian worships the sun. They will tell you that they dance to sheer exaltation beneath the blazing sun to derive from it the strength and beauty of the sun. One has only to see the rapt expressions of the self-tortured sun dancers to be convinced of the fact that the sun dance is the Indian's expression of his adoration of the sun, which I am sure they regard as the mysterious life-giver."

"For four days and nights, without food or sleep, the braves dance. During the daytime their faces are fixed intently on the blazing sun. At night they continue dancing, with their eyes on a crooked stick in a pole at the center of the dancing circle. When the four days' dance is finished the participants are totally exhausted. Nevertheless, they are decidedly happy, and as an expression of their happiness they give away their beads, their clothing, their blankets and their horses to the visitors. When the Indian is happy he is generous."

The Struggle Everlasting.
Mr. Royle leaves in a few days to supervise the production of "The Struggle Everlasting," the play which Mr. Royle and his friends believe to be his masterpiece. The play was originally produced in New York and given, a week on the road. For some reason

The Struggle Everlasting.
Mr. Royle leaves in a few days to supervise the production of "The Struggle Everlasting," the play which Mr. Royle and his friends believe to be his masterpiece. The play was originally produced in New York and given, a week on the road. For some reason the play was not a success in New York, and for that reason has not been produced since that time.

Believing that the play might prove more successful if it were made simpler, Mr. Royle has rewritten the first two acts, and it will be reproduced under his direction in San Francisco the week of July 19 in the San Francisco production. The old Utah resident always a favorite in Salt Lake, will take a leading part. Miss Roberts starred in the piece in its original New York production. DeWitt Jennings, the Salt Lake boy who is making a success in the theatrical profession, also a member of the original cast, will have the principal male role.

"The Struggle Everlasting" is an attempt to externalize the inward struggle between the physical, the intellectual and the spiritual sides of human nature. The play is peculiar more than that it is daring. It is unlike any other stage production, and it is perhaps that fact that has interfered somewhat with its success in the past. Its characters are allegorical and the dramatic incidents of the play are typical of the climaxes of the struggle for supremacy in the conflict of the human passions.

The principals in this struggle are typified in the play by the characters Mind, Soul and Body. Miss Roberts, typifying the physical side of human nature, appears as Body. Mr. Jennings, in representing the spiritual nature in the struggle, is cast as Soul.

When the play was first produced in New York it was extolled by critics as a masterly exposition of a difficult subject. Some even went so far as to say it was the greatest play ever written by an American. At the same time, however, they declared that it was too deep, too mystifying, for the average New York audience. In this their prophecies were fulfilled. Those who know of the play and of the great problem it sets forth are confident that the play, as revised, will fulfill all expectations, and that with another hearing it will always be known as Mr. Royle's masterpiece.

EXTREME HEAT AND WEAK HEART

Causes Assigned for Sudden Death of Titled Englishman at Yuma, Ariz.

FORSOOK HIS NATIVE LAND

WENT TO DESERT TO ADD TO COLLECTION OF BEETLES.

Yuma, Ariz., July 3.—A second coroner's inquest was held today over the remains of the man supposed to be Sir Arthur Cowell-Stepney, baronet, of London, who died suddenly at the Southern Pacific station here yesterday.

Five witnesses were examined, whose testimony entirely nullified the decision of the first inquest jury that death had been caused by the use of alcoholic stimulants. It was proved that he had suffered greatly from the heat after arriving here, and that this, coupled with a weak heart action, had caused his sudden end.

Examination of the papers found among the dead man's luggage shows him to have been born in Germany, of English parentage, about seventy years ago.

He was a naturalized American citizen, his papers having been taken out in Los Angeles in 1904. No letters from relatives have been found among his possessions, but a mass of scientific subjects, shows him to have been an entomologist of note, brought to the desert at this season by the desire to increase an already extensive collection of beetles.

No replies have been received to cables sent yesterday to the London solicitors, pending which the body is held at a local undertaker's establishment.

Known in Los Angeles.

Los Angeles, Cal., July 3.—G. Mortimer White, British vice consul in Los Angeles, was well acquainted with Sir Arthur Algonson Arthur Koppel Cowell-Stepney, whose death is reported from Yuma. Mr. White frequently transacted business here for his friend. Sir Alfred first called upon Mr. White in 1901 and consulted him about obtaining a divorce from Lady Stepney, which, it developed, he was unable to procure.

He was a guest at a local hotel here for several months, and left Los Angeles for New York six months ago, since which time his friend had heard nothing from him.

The baronet was the second of his line, his father having been knighted in 1871.

He was married in 1875 to the Hon. Margaret Leicester, youngest daughter of the second Baron de Tabley. He obtained a divorce from her in Idaho, but it was held invalid in the English courts in 1903, when, on the petition of Lady Cowell-Stepney, a judicial separation was granted.
